Field Service Open House

RECEPTION FOR AFS STUDENT

John Pagenkopf, chairman of the Old Rochester Regional Chapter, American Field Service, has announced there will be a meeting and open house at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George King, 8 Pearl Street, Mattapoisett, at 8 P.M. Wednesday, October 15th, to welcome AFS student Eduardo Gonzalez Campos, 17, of San Jose, Costa Rica, who is making his home with the King family. "Ed" is a senior at Old Rochester Regional High School, as is his American "brother", Michael King.

A cordial invitation to attend the open house is extended to members of the community who are interested in the AFS student exchange program and in greeting the young man whose presence here is largely due to Tri-Town support of the American Field Service.

Mattapoisett Grange

Mattapoisett Grange held its bi-monthly meeting last Thursday night. Visitors were present from Acushnet, Rochester and Wamsutta Granges.

It was voted to send the overseer to the State Grange Session as alternate delegate

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

With all the complaints about littering of the wharves and Shipyard Park, it continues and the abutters continue daily cleaning up.

One night when I went out to look at the moon, I saw a young teenager up-ending a barrel onto the Park grass. It made me furious! It was after 10 P.M. on a school night, when he should have been at home! Of course, many litterers are just plain careless, or lack home training.

Wouldn't it be great if we had signs around saying "$10.00 fine for littering", and then the police could get on with the business of enforcing it.

If it wouldn't cut down on the littering, which I bet it would, it would at least get money into our Town treasury.

Yours,
EHS

Spotlight on HEALTH

PSORIASIS, A COMMON SKIN PROBLEM

BY EDWIN T. WRIGHT, M.D.

Certified by the American Board of Dermatology

One out of every 50 persons in the U. S. has psoriasis, making it one of our most common skin diseases.

What causes this problem of scaling skin, which affects both sexes equally, is not fully understood. Many medical researchers now believe it is related to a hereditary biochemical defect in the epidermal cells. Recurrences may be triggered by a change in climate, and by physical or emotional stress. Other factors that have been found to influence the course of psoriasis include injury to the skin, obesity, over-indulgence in alcohol, and severe viral and bacterial infections of the respiratory tract.

Although there is no absolute cure for this skin disease, there are treatments that speed healing and clear up the condition for periods of time. Sunlight relieves many cases, but is ineffective for others. A soothing bath oil added to bath water helps to relieve itching. Medications, such as Alphosyl lotion and shampoo, available at drugstores, which contain tar and other ingredients to help remove scales, are particularly useful.

The newer steroid creams and ointments, especially when covered by plastic wrappings kept on overnight, have effected dramatic, temporary improvement in many cases. However, they cannot be used continuously or too often because of inconvenience of application, and undesirable side effects. For some patients, the coal-tar based medication and steroids give similar results.

Even more recently, a group of drugs called anti-metabolites are being used for highly resistant cases. However, they have to be used under strict medical supervision, and with caution.

It should be reassuring for the person with psoriasis to know that much research is currently in progress on this condition. Hopefully, before long a cure will be possible. In the meantime, following the recommendations of your physician will help to control psoriasis effectively.

NAVIGATIONAL DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS

Congressman Hastings Keith (R.-Mass.) announced that eight shoreline protection and navigational development projects, costing $1,710,000. have been approved by the House Public Works Appropriations subcommittee for the 12th Congressional District.

Among these is a $1 million allocation to begin work on dredging and widening shipping channels on the Fore and Town Rivers in Weymouth.

Other construction projects approved by the Committee include $395,000 for work on the Plymouth Harbor breakwater, and $250,000 for a breakwater in Provincetown Harbor.

Funds allocated for studies include $20,000 for Bass River; $5000 for planning a recreation-

Boys and girls want to read as earnestly as their parents and teachers would like them to and, in the near future, they will be able to do so much more easily.

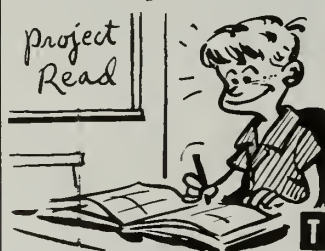

Whether they admit it or not, youngsters feel very badly about reading poorly or not at all. Stumbling over words in front of their peers can be more painful than fumbling at a football game. Embarrassment leads to behavior problems. In the past, the poor reader, rather than face repeated failure, would give up and find other ways to occupy himself in the classroom. At best, this meant drawing in a notebook or making paper airplanes.

For many years, parents, teachers and student have been concerned with this problem. Now new systems of programmed learning have been devised to make learning to read pleasant and easy for pupils of all ages and all social, economic and cultural levels.

"The theory of programmed learning is that a student can learn faster, more thoroughly and progress at his own rate if the material is given to him in small, organized bits," relates Dr. Allen D. Calvin, president of Behavioral Research Laboratories of Palo Alto, Calif., which recently introduced its highly successful Project Read, now being used in more than 40 American cities.

It is a program of individualized instruction. BRL consultants analyze the reading problems of a school system and then create a specific program to meet that system's needs. The key to success is the development of a method to solve a particular set of problems. Such systems are rapidly putting the traditional lock-step kind of reading instruction into the past.

"Our texts," continued Dr. Calvin, "are in question-and-answer or fill-in-the-blank formats. On the left side of a page is the text with blanks to be filled in; on the right side are the answers which are covered as the student reads down the text."

For many children in this project, programmed reading has brought their first experience with success. And they like their teachers, their parents and themselves better for it!

al boating area in Buttermilk Bay in Bourne; $20,000 for a beach erosion control study at Gay Head, Martha's Vineyard; $5000 for a navigation study of Madaket Harbor at Nantucket; and $15,000 for planning an entrance channel and anchorage in Popponesset Bay in Mashpee and Barnstable.

All work will be carried out by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Keith noted that the Committee had increased funding for the Weymouth Fore and Town River project from the $100,000 requested by the Administration to $1 million, and had included $5000 for the Buttermilk Bay study when the Administration had requested nothing.

The Congressman had testified before the Committee on the need for both projects.

"I am pleased that the Committee recognized the importance of these two projects to the economy of the area," Keith said. He pointed out that dredging and widening the Fore and Town Rivers would permit the Quincy General Dynamics shipyard to handle larger ships, thus, increasing employment prospects in the area. And he said that the Bourne economy, which is heavily dependent on tourism, would benefit greatly from the proposed yacht basin at Buttermilk Bay.

MARION ART CENTRE TO OFFER YOGA

In recent years Yoga has become a familiar word in the United States. Yoga, as practiced in the Orient, is a very complex system of self-discipline. For the individual interested in an acquaintance with this art, the best approach is through Hatha Yoga, which directs its attention to the physical body. The accent in Hatha Yoga is placed on posture and breathing exercises which develop in the individual a healthy natural balance. Beyond the body tone achieved through the application of Hatha Yoga, there is the natural consequence of relaxation so desirable in a world of tensions.

INVOLVEMENT IN NATURAL RESOURCE PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

To be or not to be -- involved? This question on citizen involvement in natural resource planning and development is of vital concern in southeastern Massachusetts. The lack of involvement implies public apathy. Why?

Many citizens are unaware of natural resource problems; some do not care but others do. What have your thoughts been when you see a polluted stream; a burned over forest; polluted air; erosion and sedimentation; flagrant littering; flooded areas;

a conservation commission, concerned with open space and natural resources of the town.

The Massachusetts Cooperative Extension Service has offices at the Bristol County Agricultural School in Segreganset; Barnstable County Extension Service in Barnstable; Plymouth County Extension Service in Hanson.

Regional resource development specialists are available to assist you with a multiple of problems.

The state's Department of Natural Resources includes several field offices in the area. The Division of Marine Fisheries is located at the Shaumee Crowell State Forest in Sandwich; the Division of Fisheries and Game is located at Buzzards Bay; the Division of Forests and Parks and Law Enforcement are located at Myles Standish State Forest in Carver.

The Barnstable, Bristol, Dukes, Nantucket and Plymouth Conservation Districts have technicians of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service assigned to them, with offices in Hyannis and Middleboro.

Representatives of these agencies meet with other interested organization people each month, making up the area's Technical Action Panel. This group reviews local problems and coordinates activities involving natural resources and people.

Many other organizations are active in natural resource planning and development. They include the regional planning districts, the Audubon Society, Trustees of Reservations, conservation societies, town forest committees, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Isaak Walton League, League of Women Voters, garden clubs, etc. The list is tremendous and so are their members active in their programs.

But how does this affect you? You're only one individual. You live in a town, don't you? Start asking questions and you will get answers.

Now, if you are genuinely interested and militants in the universities who advocate violence as the primary means of change represent a small minority of the student population. I'm sure that I speak for a large group of business executives who recognize and compliment the great majority of students who, despite their warranted desire for change, seek it within the framework of our laws and institutions.

The business community recognizes, as you do, that there are tremendous social inequities - stupid, unfair and unrealistic inequities - that simply have to be corrected if we are to survive. The frustrating part of this turmoil is that we cannot produce harmony and happiness by issuing a social edict in the form of law. Those who advocate the so-called "hard-nosed" approach are doing more to aggravate than help the situation. The cause must be treated before we can begin to control the effects. To do otherwise results in serious social injustice. The real issue is: are we too late? Is there a way out? I am sure there is. I am equally sure it will be difficult and take time - a long time. Yet I, for one, see a faint light ahead.

It's axiomatic, and even tiresome, to repeat that our only constant is change. It is true, nevertheless, and if we can understand it and somehow make it work for us we have it made. Call it the development of job satisfaction. Call it planned achievement. In one form or another, it spells personal success. And this is our quest.

Business is both an art and a science. Certainly, the computer serves the scientific requirements, but this is only one side of the coin. It is the non-human side. Understand it. Make it work for you ... but recognize that it is only one side. Let us turn the coin over.

Fifty years ago, business spent very little money on research and development of new products. A quarter of a century later, new-product research and development began to emerge as an accepted, necessary investment. Ten years ago (and these times are, of course, approximate at best) business began to develop a new concept of investment in the future. I call it "Social R & D". It recognizes that business and society are one, that social problems are also business problems and that the disadvantaged had better be served. Otherwise business and society will suffer and go down together. This is not just nice, cocktail party talk. This is self-serving, survivorship talk. It is real and necessary. Business relates to

A number of companies have adopted ghetto area high schools, providing comprehensive technical training and assistance programs.

There are so many new programs to assist black business men and encourage initiative and ownership that I could talk to you for hours on the subject.

All these programs testify to the growing voluntary commitment of the businessman. It is a commitment of skills, know-how, and drive.

Business is a part of the community. Each office, each factory, is a community within a community, and they cannot operate successfully if the immediate environs are unhealthy, or degrading. And business - if it be profitable - has the money to spend for Social Research and Development. Please notice that I said, "if it be profitable". Perhaps this is a good time to express myself with respect to profit, realizing that to some it has become an evil word.

Only recently, a survey taken among college students indicated that 60% did not believe that the profit motive was necessary. Possibly, what they have not stopped to realize is that competitive business - which offers the individual and the investor, the employee and the consumer, incentives and freedom of choice - could not survive without profit. Profit derived from business is the thrust, the power, the motivation behind our free society. Some of you will ultimately end up devoting your lives to the public sector, and our collective hats are off to you. Whether you go into government or into a foundation-financed social program is immaterial. The fact remains that either one is entirely dependent upon the real wealth produced by the private sector of our economy. Without profits, there can be no taxes, without taxes, there can be no government operation. I submit to you that profit is not only desirable; it is essential. Naturally, it must not be abused. What is a fair profit? I personal-

JUNIOR FIRE MARSHAL GOLD MEDAL

The Junior Fire Marshal Gold Medal, The Hartford's official tribute to young fire heroes, has been awarded ten times during the past twelve years. With the Medal goes a $2,500 paid-up life insurance policy ... and national acclaim.

C. W. Wyrick, president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs in 1968, pins Gold Medal on Wanda Louise Foster.

Children and matches ... somehow they just get together. Whether it's caused by the intrigue of the forbidden, the attractiveness of the bright flames, or curiosity about the unknown - small fry like fire.

As youngsters grow up they really never seem to lose this fascination. The result: a sickening number of lives and property lost because of children and matches. Junior Fire Marshal's goal for Fire Prevention Week is to teach children to leave matches alone. We hope to accomplish this with your help.

ly, like the definition I found in our own Dun's Review of May, 1964 ... "A fair profit is the margin by which risk is rewarded and survival assured in the market place." Profit-making is not a privilege. It is a responsibility. It is basic to growth and, if a company does not grow in our highly competitive society, it will eventually pass from the scene.

I spoke earlier of the faint light that I see ahead, providing business continues to recognize its opportunities and further implements its social responsibilities. The business balance sheet of the future will be not only a tabulation of assets and liabilities, but also a measurement of how each business reaches out for opportunity and assumes responsibility. Business should not exclude government in this same area of responsibility, but rather should work in conjunction with it. I sincerely believe that businessmen and the companies they represent must be leaders.

Of course it's important and essential that all of us concern ourselves with broad social principles. This is not meaningful, however, unless it can somehow be related to each of you. What does it mean to your life? How should you react? How can you help? How can you benefit?
